

SILVER RETALIATION.

The Silvermen of the West are no longer falling tamely in line and bowing their backs to the tariff lash, welded by the men who represent the bloated manufacturing industries of the East. The Silvermen sent in their blow of retaliation, when the vote for the consideration of the revenue emergency bill came up.

There was much excitement in the Senate while the roll was called. As the names of Senators were recorded, it was evident that the motion would be defeated. Senators Teller, Carter, Mantle and Dubois voted as they did on the previous roll-call, against consideration, Senator Cannon of Utah, who was absent on February 14th, but who would at that time have recorded himself for the taking up of the bill, cast his vote against its consideration. The other Republican Senators from the free coinage States voted as they did before or were paired in the matter under consideration. The announcement of the vote resulted in one of the most exciting and acrimonious debates of the present session. Senator Morrill practically read the five Republican free coinage Senators out of the Republican party, and was replied to in terms of stringing rebuke by Senator Teller. Senator Teller was never in better form than when he declared that neither he nor his Republican associates would take their Republicanism from Cleveland Democracy nor from the chairman of the Finance Committee; that they would be responsible for their own ideas of duty to their constituencies, and they themselves could as well afford to do without them.

Senator Sherman followed in a speech in which he dropped entirely the mask of bimetalism, announced that free coinage was dead, killed by a two-to-one vote in the House of Representatives, and that the only issue was the non-partisan one of furnishing revenue in an emergency when an issue of $263,000,000 worth of bonds had been forced because Congress had refused to supply the needed funds for the conduct of the Government.

Senator Stewart and Fry followed, the latter of whom declared that the tariff was dead for the present session, and that there was no use in attempting to resuscitate it. This closed the incident.

The Eastern Republicans must be somewhat acquainted with the fact by this time that the tariff barons cannot make Congress protect special industries to the exclusion of others.

MORGAN'S PULL.

The Secretary of the Treasury has awarded the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., bonds to the amount of $4,700,000 that the original bidders did not call for. The New York World says that the Investment Corporation of New York offered 114.50 for these bonds. Morgan gets them at 110.6877, the price he bid for the entire issue. The difference is about $200,000. In the absence of other reason for this award, it is supposed that the Morgan syndicate promises to pay for the bonds with gold of its own. Still, the sum of $200,000 is a high premium to pay on less than $5,000,000 in gold, especially when we remember that the Administration is pledged to maintain the parity between the different kinds of money.

Postal street cars will soon be running in San Francisco. They will facilitate the work of the postoffice, add to the revenue of the Southern Pacific and put the street car lines on the Octopus under the immediate protection of the United States troops in case of a strike or other similar trouble.—S. F. Report.

The above idea is something more than ridiculous. It is idle talk to say that anything that facilitates the carrying of mails and is beneficial to the public should not be done. The question of future strikes or who makes the money out of a public necessity, cuts no figure in a case of this kind. The policy of mail cars on the street lines, in no way prevents a man walking from Lone Mountain to the ferry to mail a letter if he sees fit.

Indian Agent Hargrove of the Duck Valley Reservation has returned to Elko from a visit to Indiana. He tells the Independent that the silver question is talked of in hotels, the cars and everywhere in the East to the exclusion of every other political question. The leaders of both parties are opposed to silver, but the rank and file are in favor of it.

Fitzsimmons is still maintaining an altitudinous attitude regarding Corbett.
